FARM BUREAU TO BE ESTABLISHED BY ROCK FARMERS

Rock county is to have a series of meetings to acquaint the farmers with the advantages of belonging to a farm bureau.

Saturday, March 20, J. C. Sallor, state organizer for Illinois, will be here. Janesville meeting will be followed by other meetings throughout the county. Day meetings and evening meetings will be held in practically every community.

After this week of meetings, which will close March 27, a drive will be put on in every township in Rock county to get members.

Every farmer will be visited. The executive committee has issued a call and a statement of the work designed to be accomplished by the establishment of the bureau. This is the organization free from politics and the declaration of the bureau is that it aims to do things for the farmer on the farm and not as a political body. The statement of the committee follows:

"Today more than ever before in our history a strong organization of farmers is needed, not alone to grow and market their crops, but to put agriculture on a solid foundation, on an equal footing with other business. The long hours of labor, the work of the weaver, and the children, the self denial of the whole farm family, and the exhaustion of soil fertility have made it possible to pay the farmer. We cannot continue to do it.

"It is just as important to study and work out marketing and plant corn and put up hay. Our business will never be on a permanent basis until we do. The only way we can solve these problems is by a strong, level-headed organization. Rock county has made a good start.

"Two very successful things have been held, officers have been elected, also a board of directors.

"The executive committee, consisting of George Hill, Whitewater; H. Hemmingsway, Janesville; H. C. R. Russell, Rockford; J. C. Sallor, Janesville; C. O. Osgard, Orfordville; D. P. McCarthy, Evansville, and F. J. Arnold, Janesville, are working to push the organization.

"A state organizer from Illinois has been employed to take charge of the drive for membership. The organization has been started in Janesville, and others are to be formed throughout the county. Committees have been appointed to investigate the feasibility of establishing a Federal Farm Loan association in the county; purchasing of land for the benefit of the farmer; and the building of farmers' elevators.

"A state organization known as the Wisconsin Federation of Farmers Associations is contemplated. The state organization will be affiliated with the National Farm Bureau. Through this powerful organization the farmers will receive much benefit from legislation advantageous to them.

"The organization will handle direct marketing and buying facilities. It hopes to reduce the cost of living for the people of the city as well as for the farmer."

Breaks into Song Over Gazette Advertising Results

To the Management, Janesville Gazette, Janesville, Wis.

Gentlemen: A short time ago, as attorney for an estate, I had a home for sale in your city, and I sent you an "ad" for insertion in your paper for a "quick sale."

A quick sale was made and as I sat down this morning to write you a check for the small amount of money which I recognize as a part of my intellectual make-up, suggested may be an appropriate wording for the letter, and here it is.

I enclose you a check for one dollar eight.

The amount of my bill outlined on your slate, And now in this sending, permit me to say, This bill for your service most gladly I pay.

You published the "ad" of a home I'd for sale, Most attractive, inviting in every detail, And it met the condition and brought one across, To deal with the party you had labeled as boss.

A man of good sense, with cash in his hand Exchanged it for deed of this house and the land, And enabled thereby to come in, out of the war, He voiced his glad thanks for the Janesville Gazette.

Mine too! Very truly yours, JOEL B. DOW.

FORWARD, JANESVILLE!

To make Janesville a better place in which to live and in which to do business, the Gazette pledges itself to work for and support these things:

Housing survey to discourage exorbitant rentals; encouragement of building more houses; appraisal of property values so that rent profiteers may be made to pay the increased amount of taxes.

Open roads in the country 365 days of the year; better roads generally, and support of the road building plan for better streets and more paved streets in the city.

A market pavilion in the city which may also be used for many other purposes by farmers and livestock producers.

A community building to be used for auditorium, sport events, meetings, rest rooms, and also as a fitting memorial for soldiers.

Open the churches seven days a week and stop economic waste in room and time. Make basement meeting places for the young, and provide gymnasium facilities.

Build a real home for the girls who come here to work.

Open the fair grounds this year as a recreation park with tennis courts and other play apparatus. Establish parties and playgrounds.

Better the street car service as population increases.

JUST FOLKS

Edgar A. Guest

THE GOLFER'S SONG TO SPRING.
Let poets sing of daffodils and tulips and the crocuses,
The green upon the budding trees, the murmuring
of the gentle breeze;
Let budding Homers twang their lyres, and sing the charm of gentle skies,
I wish some rhyme would arise to cheerle for the golfing guys;
I want a poet now to dash a lyric from his ready pen,
And sing how good it is to get your clubs and shoot
the ball again.

Forget the violets that bloom, forget the nodding
tulips, too,
The green is on the fairway now, and overhead
the sky is blue;
The bunkers now are raked and clean, the ice has quit their caverns deep,
And there are pretty little flags to flutter where the breezes sweep;
Oh, gladness Spring, oh, glorious Spring! oh, season
of delightful thrill!
When men once more shall call out "Fore!" and swat the testive little ball.

What cares the golfing bug about the song birds
which are tuning up?
Tell him about the tinkling sound of golf balls dropping in the cup.
Bid him to hurry to the club and get his knickerbockers out,
For once again the time has come to swat the little ball about;
The dreary winter now is done—tell him to quit
the haunts of men;
Spring open wide the links once more—it's time to be at it again.

knew of these cruelties and testified glibly about the acts after the mother was arrested.

The testimony, citation of other cases, the neglect of neighbors to make report of the cruelties, brings forth a question as to whether there are not many more of these incidents of brutal treatment of children in isolated communities and if so, who is to make it his business to interfere and save the child from eventual murder?

The county nurse can do much in the way of bettering conditions, but her hands are not far-reaching enough to take in the cases at issue here. It is the neighbor's business and the town's business, the business of every person with any humanity to see that there are no more Alban Blomskis.

Mr. Wilson seems to have gone off at a tangent on the criticism of France. France has been America's great friend, and for a president to say that she is in the hands of a military dictatorship comes with poor diplomatic grace. Mr. Lansing never would have made that error.

If the women of Janesville vote this spring we will see some new angles in the election. Aldermen should at once declare themselves on the suffrage and other questions, including clean streets and alleys.

Taming the Everglades

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 13.—
The taming of the everglades used to be a thrilling and dangerous adventure, now any man can do it in two days on a comfortable boat. The glades used to produce nothing but alligators and magazine stories; now they are producing sugar cane, corn, and garden truck.

This means that one of the last great American wildernesses is about to be tamed. True, only a small fraction of its area, which is about the same as that of Connecticut, has been made habitable for men. Fifteen thousand acres is an estimate of the area now under cultivation, and about three thousand people live in the everglades, including the two thousand in Manatee, the glade metropolis.

Drainage Means Abolition

But the drainage canals which are to pierce the watery heart of the great swamp are almost completed.
The water is receding steadily, the area of farm land creeping farther in. The water of the river, which perhaps a fifth of the whole area in the far southern end, which will probably never be drained because it is too low, remains an important re-
memento of what the glades were,
and it should by all means be made
into a state or national reservation.
For the glades as a whole are doomed.

Glades Are Suburban

The glades are certainly one of the most suburban of the great wildnesses on the face of the earth.
Within 36 hours of New York by rail, surrounded for a long time by populous and cultivated lands, they are perhaps a fifth of the whole area in
the far southern end, which will probably never be drained because it
is too low, remains an important re-
memento of what the glades were,
and it should by all means be made
into a state or national reservation.
For the glades as a whole are doom-
ed.

Real Estate Man Does It

Hunters, fishermen, Indians, explorers and naturalists have traversed the glades for a good many years without in any way changing them.
But now an individual has invaded their sacred silence. "Who brings change in his wake. This individual is the Florida Real Estate man, than whom there is no more belligerent, imaginative and indomitable resistant of his ubiquitous species.
A Florida real estate agent can sell you a pile of sand or a puddle of water without halt trying. He can take you out and show you some of the wildest and dreariest spots in the world, and the same day he can show you the most beautiful view of the spoken word he can make you see that same desert blooming with orange blossoms, and green with corn. When traveling in Florida it is always well to keep the finger crossed and make a resolution not to sign anything.

State Owns Large Tract

But the real estate man is not supreme in the glades. Of its drain-able lands there are about two million acres in private ownership, but nearly a million and a half are still owned by the state of Florida. The state is doing the work of cutting the primary drainage canals, and a settler can buy land direct from the state.

To understand this work of drainage you must know that the glades are not a swamp in the usual sense of the term. They consist of a great shallow limestone basin elevated a dozen feet above the sea. This basin is filled with clean fresh, potable water by innumerable springs rising from the bottom. The water is always slightly moving. For this reason there are scarcely any mosquitoes and the region is quite healthy.

Began Drainage in 1906

The state began the work of primary drainage in 1906, and it will be completed now within a few years.

This work consists in cutting a number of canals through the rim of the basin, so that the water can flow into the sea. But the cutting of these primary canals does not thoroughly drain the land, and the state has in order to do this, laterals and sub-lateral canals must be cut, and this work devolves upon those who buy the land.

The state law favors the individual settler in search of a home rather than the development company and the speculator. It provides that if anyone wants to buy more than 320 acres of land in the glades, he must make a bid and the lands must then be advertised and sold to the highest bidder. No real estate operator likes to buy land that way. He goes to all the expense of making an investigation of the land, and then someone else perhaps outbids him and takes them away from him. The chances of getting them at a bargain are slim.

Individual Has Hard Time
The trouble is that the individual settler has rather a hard time draining his lands. He can only drain about 320 acres in lots from ten thousand to fifteen thousand acres.
The man who takes up a hundred acres may have difficulty. It is said that the individual settler wants less than 320 acres, on the other hand, can buy from the state at the assessed value of the land, which is from $35 to $50 an acre.

The settlement of the glades is said to be proceeding slowly, despite the fact that the water is being muck which is left exposed by the receding water. It appears that when the land is first drained, it is impregnated with muck, and will not grow crops. The average settler does not seem to understand this. The land should be allowed to live exposed for a year or so before it can be safely cultivated, except in a few crops of no great value.

Settlement Is Slow

No doubt settlement is slow also because the amount of capital required to put a hundred acres of the glades under cultivation is considerable. When a man has to pay $50 an acre for the land, and then dig his own canals and put his land under the plow, he has a considerable investment to make. None-the-less, those who have done the thing right
have splendid and profitable farms.

One of the most interesting products of the little patch of the glades
now under cultivation is sugar cane.
The Floridians claim that it grows
there much better than in Louisiana.
The cultivation of it began only five years ago and is rapidly spreading.
If the shortage and attendant high prices of sugar continue, it is quite probable that the greater part of the Everglades will be converted into a great sugar bowl for the United States.

Corn and Cabbages Grow

Other products of the glades are corn, cabbage, egg-plant and other truck crops. Roads are being built through the cultivated lands, and the rich and fertile soil is appearance of a prosperous farming district. The drainage canals will also always furnish the glade farmers with a cheap means of transportation, too. Real estate agents now carry their clients far into the glades and back very quickly in high speed motor buses.

The individual who probably witnesses with least joy this taming of the Everglades is the Seminole Indian. He has long been a hunter and his hunting ground. When they are gone, he, very likely, will have to go, too.

I'm called upon, in my profession,
To write of the glories of Spring.
But do you suppose
With a cold in my nose
And diaphanous hose
Through which the wind blows,
I can perpetrate any such thing?

I'm asked to expand on the beauties
Of meadows, of brooks and of rills,
With the snow six feet high,
While the chill breezes sigh,
Through the trees far and high
And the pool man stands by
And rattles his devilish bills.

Some rhymesters have rhymed of the

Have raved over Springtime and

It is pleasing to note that congress has finally fastened upon a subject of discussion which vitally affects the future of the nation, the great American question—General Persh-ing's pants.

One congressman, in an address
the last night of the session, made the startling charge that the general's pants are of English cut. This disclosure takes us entirely unawares.
Even in this age of sensation, upon sensations, we are astounded and our national mind does not seem to grasp the full import of this dreadful revelation. We can only guess in our astonishment, at this and wondrous what will happen next.

Pershing in English pants. My word! What a bang, blinding bloomin, blawasted outrage! Hi say, Old Thing, oo's your blighter of a draper?
We certainly can sympathize with the general, however. Once we owned a pair of English pants. They were well-fitting pants and were quite pretty, being of pug-top effect in pale sawder. But the whole trouble was the pants insisted upon standing up always for "God Save the King."

WHOS WHO

in the Daily News

WILLIAM AVERILL HARRIMAN

Unless all signs fail, William Averill Harriman, of Edward Harriman, has set out to play a leading part in the steamship world akin to what his father did in the railroad industry. Within the last month the young Harriman has acquired a fleet of interests in a fleet of some 250 steamships, both large and small, and achieved an eminence now which would stamp him
as a big factor.
The elder Harriman, however, has
one big advantage
over his son.
He was considerably
beyond his son's 29 years before he came to be hailed as a great organizer and con-solidator. Age counts for nothing in the game of the steamship.
man plays it, and he has gone out to gather in steamship lines in a way which promises much of interest for the future.

The career of young Harriman in the steamship business, as in everything else in which he has interested himself, has been meteoric. It was only a few months ago that he organized the investment banking house of W. A. Harriman & Co., opened offices in New York, and really entered the shipping business.
True, in 1917 he was chairman of the Javet of the Maritime Shipping corporation, which later took over the Chester Shipbuilding corporation and built forty 8,000 ton fabricated
steel ships for the United States Fleet corporation, but that was only a tryout for the larger development in which he is now interested.

Those who know Mr. Harriman predict he will not stop with his present achievements. This is not his method. All of his life he has done things on a big scale. Even though he had never been an orsman of any sort, he convinced Yale while he was a student there, that he was equipped to train a crew and after a visit to England to study British rowing methods he came back to this country and was named the first undergraduate rowing coach Yale ever had.

In September, 1916, Mr. Harriman married Miss Kitty Lanier Lawrence, granddaughter of Charles Lanier.

Behind Your Telephone

Back of that telephone on your wall or your people whose business it is to provide for and make your telephone service.

The telephone instrument itself is the smallest part of the telephone exchange; it represents hardly one-tenth the investment the company has made to provide a line for your own special use; its maintenance is but an insignificant fraction of the cost of the

MRS. BOND DELIGHT TO 300 TEACHERS

Three Hundred Assembled at High School Hear Her Sing "A Perfect Day."

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond today made her first public appearance in this city since 1916 when she talked and sang "A Perfect Day" before 300 teachers attending the annual meeting of the Rock County Teachers' association at high school. Sectional meetings were conducted in the morning by Supt. H. H. Fautz, grammar division; Supt. F. C. Holt, Edgerton, primary division; Prin. J. H. McNeil, Beloit, high school division.

Children on Program
Miss Bertha Rogers gave an interesting paper on "Suggestive Activities for Primary Schools." Twelve pupils of the model school directed by Miss Bessie Jenkins sang marching songs. Four little boys in soldier suits marching in a parade were put on by four little girls of Miss Marie Gootch's first grade, Washington school.

Dramatization of "The Landing of the Pilgrims" was given by a group of fourth grade children of the Washington school taught by Miss Margaret Mackie. A Jefferson school pupil, Hazel Crow, told the story of the Pilgrims. Another Goosey character to illustrate. Two little girls in black and white costumes gave a folk dance taught by their teacher, Miss Marie Gootch. "Black and White" dance was played by Miss Gootch's pupils. Miss Sarah Hickey played accompaniment.

Other speakers at the sectional meetings were, Pres. F. S. Hyer, Whitewater normal, Prin. Lenore Casaford, Washington school; Prin. Florence Harp, Onondaga, Prin. H. L. Miller, Madison; Prin. R. A. Buell, Milton Junction.

Miss Florence Snyder assisted by the girls' double quartet of the high school led in community singing.

OBITUARY

The funeral of Mrs. Elmina Gilden was held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at Trinity church. Burial was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

Elmina C. Bennett was born Sept. 9, 1837 at Watertown, N. Y., coming to the territory of Wisconsin in 1847 with her parents. In 1850 the family moved to Janesville, from the home which they had formerly occupied at Alton, Ill. Her parents, Daniel and Deborah Leeds were of Puritan ancestry.

She married Jacob M. Glidden Dec. 25, 1858. He served in the Civil war and died 1865 leaving the widow with three small children, Ruby, Alida and Georgia. Alida Glidden passed away 23 years ago. Mrs. Ruby Whittier and Miss Georgia Glidden, one grandchild, Charles Whittier, and three great-grandchildren are left to mourn her death. Her husband, brother, D. D. Bennett and this city.

Mrs. Glidden was preceded in death by two brothers, N. W. Bennett, an early schoolmate of this city and John R. Bennett, judge of the Twelfth circuit of Wisconsin, two sisters, Mrs. J. M. McGowan and Mrs. George Thompson also of this city.

Lock your doors, RAFFLES is coming to Janesville.

TOWN OF JANESVILLE

POLITICAL POT C. C. MEMBERSHIP BEGINS TO BOIL NEAR 850 MARK

New Names Mentioned as Candidates for Aldermen—Women to Meet Here.

The political pot for the local city elections on April 6, has started to boil.

With new names mentioned today as probable entries in the aldermanic race, comes the announcement that the Woman Suffrage association of Rock county is alive to the possibilities of the suffrage amendment passing in time to permit the women to vote.

Meeting Is Called.
Notices to all women voters, and especially those who are members of the county suffrage organization, to attend a meeting March 20 in Library hall, Janesville, at 1:30 were sent out today. This step was taken close on the heels of sentiment expressed by leaders among the women yesterday that they would be solicited to support the suffrage association so as to be ready for the possibility of being entitled to cast their ballots. The notice is signed by Mrs. C. Townsend, representing the National League of Women Voters.

Party Favors Amendment.
Speaking of the indications that the women may be able to vote, Emil Fautz, alderman from the fourth ward, set up for reelection stated today that he is not at all sure that the women have a chance.

"Sure," he said, "we want the women to vote. Women are the best friends we got. Hope the amendment goes through."

Among the names mentioned today as possible candidates in the impending aldermanic battle are J. P. Fitch, to run against J. J. Dulin in the fifth ward, and Walter Helms against J. J. Cronin in the third.

Last days for filing nomination papers with the city clerk are March 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Home After 4½ Years In Army Signal Unit

After spending three years overseas with the United States forces, during which time he saw action with the French and with the American army as a signal corps man and was wounded three times, Pvt. Sydney Miller, 408 Cavalry street, this city, is spending a month's furlough at his home before going to Camp Grant to finish out his service until next October.

Miller enlisted in the eighth field signal battalion at Milwaukee in October, 1916, was sent to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, and took his training at Fort Leavenworth. He was sent to Camp Grant in 1917, and was sent to El Paso on the Mexican border, where he met his brother, Merton, who was in the cavalry.

In Battle of Marne
Following the work of aiding in organizing a field signal battalion at Presidio, Monterey, Cal., he left with his outfit for France, landing at Brest in June, 1917. Not long after he was sent to the front with the 14th French division and took part in the second battle of the Marne until his organization went in as an American division on the Vesle sector participating in battles in the Toulon sector at St. Mihiel and the Argonne.

Was Gassed Twice.
In July, 1918, Miller was gassed while with the French and kept from the front for 10 days. A short time later he received a slight shrapnel wound in the hand and on October 10, 1918, while in the Argonne he was shot in the back and sent back to the hospital at Chaumont.

On the signing of the armistice he was returned to his original duty and went with them on the long hike following the Germans. He was in the Army of Occupation being stationed at Mayen, Germany, the work of his organization was to take over the German telephone and telegraph lines in order to establish immediate lines of communication.

Goes to Belgium.
In December, 1918, he went to Chantilly-sur-Seine for a month and when all men except the regulars were ordered home, he went back to Belgium to his home.

From there he was detailed as chief clerk in the 35th Service Co., Signal Corps, in Paris.

In December he was ordered to the United States via Brest and returned with the peace commission. He is now stationed with headquarters, 5th field signal battalion, Camp Grant. While in Paris, he was promoted for a year at a private rating. He ran throughout the war was that of a sergeant, signal corps.

Shortly after he entered the service, he married Miss Jennie Took of this city.

POWER FARMING PRIZES OFFERED

Shortage of farm labor in Rock county being so acute, farmers this spring are turning their attention to the possibilities of a more general use of power machinery. They are looking to the tractor, especially, as a means whereby they may hold their help and their sons and daughters on the land by providing less drudgery and shorter hours to meet the hardships of more attractive jobs found in cities.

In line with this forward step, Robert H. Buggs, this city, is offering prizes to high school and rural school students for essays on the subject of power farming. The contest will close on March 27.

The prizes are:
To high school students: First, $20; second, $15; third, $10; fourth, $5; fifth, $5.

To grade students outside city of Janesville: First, $20; second, $15; third, $10; fourth, $5; fifth, $5.

To high school teacher whose pupils win first prize, $50.

To grade teacher in schools outside Janesville whose pupil wins first prize, $20.

Local railway clerks have completed arrangements for a dancing party to be given in the Armory, Friday, April 9. A special train will be chartered to bring Madison railroad employees to the city that night to attend the affair.

Boyd's orchestra, Madison, has been engaged to furnish the music. The committee in charge is made up of David Cunningham, Stanley Garbutt, Robert Cody, Leo Murtland, and Walter Schumaker, and J. Frayer.

News Notes From Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Alma Rubens but recently arrived in New York and already that city is claiming her as a native, despite the fact that the Motion Picture Directory state in black and white that Alma was born in San Francisco. Miss Rubens started her screen career—yes, you've guessed it—with Triangle. Two guesses is all you ever need to determine where any well known actor or actress started, for either Triangle or D. W. Griffith is invariably the right answer.

Many critics whose words have weight have called this young woman a young Duse. She has aroused the interest of both managers and directors by her serious work and the latest news is that she is to appear on the legitimate stage. This will not interfere with her picture work, however. She has recently signed a contract with Cosmopolitan Films and her first picture is scheduled for release this month. It is called "Thoughtless Woman." She is now working on her second picture, "The World and His Wife."

Miss Rubens prefers to be known as a genuine artist rather than a star. She asserts, may come and go, but once an artist always an artist.

Resume of Moving Picture Programs of Last Week

(By MRS. ARTHUR HELLM.)
The hour of the program of the Majestic and Beverly theaters on Saturday and Sunday evening has been changed to permit the giving of three programs a week. The former begins at 6 o'clock and the latter at 8:30 on these two evenings. All theaters have been giving "Jewels" in their advertisement.

The Beverly picture for Sunday was a mystery play, called "The Mystery of the Blue Room," in which the clue was cleverly concealed until the last scene. The bandbox was used by an actress who wished to conceal her expensive jeweled collar, concealing it in the hat lining, afterward sending it to a playboy who was coming over on the ship. The picture was a mystery play, called "The Mystery of the Blue Room," in which the clue was cleverly concealed until the last scene. The bandbox was used by an actress who wished to conceal her expensive jeweled collar, concealing it in the hat lining, afterward sending it to a playboy who was coming over on the ship.

Her father has a double who is trying to steal the collar, and it is made to appear that the girl is the crook, because she will not inform against her supposed father. The girl is imprisoned, and the father is straightened out.

"The Natural Law," which pertains to sex attraction, was given at the Majestic Sunday, and was rather warm in spots. Though treated in a proper way, it is a risky subject to present to mixed audiences, and one wonders how it got by the censors.

A much more pleasing picture was "Pretty Smooth," given Wednesday. Priscilla Dean represented a crook who committed robberies for the excitement of the game, and does some clever work in this role. But convinced of the evil of the course she and her husband go to a country home and live straight, thereafter. A brilliant drama of stage life was given at the Apollo on the first part of the week. In "Mind the Paint," Anita Stewart was the paint artist who created havoc in the hearts of the young society men but the name of the play was taken from a popular song written for her to sing in the production. It is an English story and a lieutenant in the guards was for a time a favored suitor. Later she dropped him and took up with an earl whom she expected to marry, and just as the wedding was about to occur, the old lover put in an appearance and pled so hard for reinstatement that she reconsidered matters and took him back. Miss Stewart is so dainty in her ways that she lends artistic realism to her scenes.

ORGANIST TO GIVE TWO RECITALS HERE

Gatty Sellars, famous English organist, will give two pipe organ recitals at the Methodist church here Monday, one at four and one at eight o'clock. The afternoon concert has been arranged to give members of the Apollo club an opportunity to hear the great musician. When Mr. Sellars was engaged it was not known the last recital of the Apollo club was also to be given on that date.

Mr. Sellars is known as the world's greatest descriptive organist. His organ arrangement of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" was in full vogue during the war and is still popular. He will use 50 chimes in his recital here.

No admission fee will be charged for either concert, a silver offering being taken at the door.

AMUSEMENTS

(Notices furnished by the Theatres.)

MYERS THEATRE
We will tell the people of Janesville they never had the pleasure of attending a more carefully selected organization than is this "Raffles" attraction. Every person on the program has held a star line. And when people in the entertainment profession have accomplished this they have proved to the world they are entitled to be called artists. Knowing the worth of the company, "Raffles," the man that has more newspaper space than any other man in his profession, takes great pleasure in recommending his attraction to the lovers of good entertainment in Janesville. All those who attend, go and tell their friends not to miss it. It is grand.

councils of France. They were defeated then, but they are in control now.

This accusation has brought forth a storm of protests from the French press all the way from the French president to the regrettable ill health of the president to the effect that "America is being ruled by a lunatic."

French Amateurs at Wilson. The French government is reported to have instructed Ambassador Jusserand to express to the American government its surprise and amazement at the president's reference to France but in Washington this does not awaken much excitement because not so long ago Viscount Grey wrote a letter to the London Times expressing views freely about American political affairs and the French president's support of the wholeheartedly that communication and defended it as immune from diplomatic impropriety because it was a personal and not an official statement. Thus the president's supporters contend his letter to Senator Hitchcock should be taken—as a personal communication from one member of the United States government to another.

On the other hand, the insinuation of imperialism made by the president is thought to be founded on his appearance over the manner in which the so-called "joker" in the peace treaty has already been invoked to threaten a military occupation of the left bank of the Rhine. The president entertains the friendliest feelings for Marshal Foch but the suspicion in recent months has been that the distinguished military genius of France is much more interested in acquiring the Rhineland for France, a proposal which he openly advocated during the sessions of the peace conference than he is at present in seeing carried out the letter of the compromise which Mr. Wilson agreed to and which liberals in America criticized him for doing. It is partly Mr. Wilson's smarting under the criticism of liberal opinion and partly Mr. Wilson seeking to prevent the predictions of those who doubt France's intentions which is really believed to be back of the reference to France in the Hitchcock letter. It was not inserted as a passing argument, but unquestionably as a solemn warning to what Mr. Wilson sees in France—a rising military power.

Look for Agreement.
Frenchmen here say the president is all wrong, that he doesn't understand French politics and that he is too suspicious. (Grousing, enough, Senator Lodge, the republican leader, by his statement deploring Mr. Wilson's reference to France, has encouraged Frenchmen to believe that the republican leader may yet revert to a position of active friendship for France in the American senate. But to France the true test of the sincerity of either the democrats or republicans in the United States in their professions of friendship for France will depend on a large extent upon whether the special French-British-American defensive agreement is ratified. There are those who think neither Mr. Wilson nor the senate is especially anxious at present to support the agreement and as for the president some observers profess to see him retiring from the

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am twenty-four years old and was engaged to a girl two months previous to my entering service. During my absence the rumor started that I was among the missing and owing to the fact that mail communications were so few, were neither she nor my folks heard from for some time, making it more certain that the rumor was true.

I have been told by friends that she took it very hard, but this is a question in my mind, for she got married to another fellow very quickly after my return, and she is not happily married. She does not show directly, but through her friends I have found that she still cares for me.

They also tell me that there is going to be a change in her family very soon. I am sure that she will be free to love me, but I am not sure if she does on her own accord, or let her be the same as I did before leaving.

Do nothing to encourage the separation. If the other fellow can't free himself from the man she does not love, you will be free to take her or let her go, as your heart dictates. Be patient and let time work out this tangle for you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My boy friend was here in January and I saw him. I have written to him twice since he went back and I have only received one letter from him. I sent him a birthday card and also a Valentine. It has been three weeks since I heard from him. Please tell me the reason he does not write. We have been engaged two months and I will be married this summer. Do you think he is interested in some other girl?

It is impossible to say whether or not the young man is interested in another girl. It is evident, however, that he is not writing to you.

She Married an Average Man

By ZOE BECKLEY.

When Jim told me today about a business scheme that has been on his mind for weeks, I realized for the first time how little the average wife understands of her husband's business. It was only when I was told that it was a real problem, the decision of which will affect the whole life of the man, that I began to listen and try to comprehend.

"But Jim," I puzzled with knit brows, "it would mean our leaving Hammond's Corners and going to Milwaukee."

"It would eventually," he answered. "That's the main difficulty. Under present circumstances, there are three months of development necessary before the place would be in shape as an amusement park. I would practically have to live there in a crumpled shack with a gang of men, hustling day and night."

"Then, if we make a go of it, there should be big returns—a fortune," I said. "The fellow who owns the place has put his last dollar into the scheme. He needs a couple of thousand more for immediate improvements, and I've saved that much, but I'd hate to devote my whole life and energy to it. What do you say, dear? Shall we be sports and take a chance? It's almost a certainty!"

"It's so—so sudden, Jimmie! I don't know what to say. And it's all so vague to me yet. I answered, with a shrug, 'We're awfully comfortable here—'

"Yes, but we mustn't settle down into mere comfort because it's the wisest thing to do. We want to get on, don't we dear? We want to—"

HEALTH IN THE LAST STAGES

Follow certainly has to laugh at the idea of people busy with the health bug. A favorite one is that tea and coffee are bad for one's nerves, stomach or anything, and then think of the people as I put away one or two cups of the finest coffee to be found in this world every morning at breakfast.

Then there is the army of deep breathers. These unfortunates must suffer agonies worrying about getting their chests straightened. I up with their bread baskets, or inhaled 3 percent too much ozone. If there is anyone sympathizing with it is the man who practices deep breathing. I'd hate to have his bug.

Of all infected with the health bug the chap that sprays his nose and gorges his throat to protect himself.

The Stamp of Approval

The complete satisfaction of fashionable and discriminating women has given to a place which is unchallenged.

Redfern Corsets

Supremely smart, distinguished, elegant—Redfern Corsets are notable chiefly for their exquisite lines, the flat back and the slender, graceful hips, which make them the inevitable choice of the woman of fastidious taste.

from disease which is going around is probably the most hopeless. He could be weaned away from his imaginary prophylaxis as readily as a grandchild could be persuaded that it does him no harm to get her feet wet occasionally.

Another sufferer with whom I might sympathize if it would help at all is the man or woman that strives to avoid drafts in his quest for fresh air. He is related by marriage—assuming there is no other way of being related—with the Greek who ascribes his aches and pains and indispositions and justifications of lameness in the winter, the bedclothes or the atmosphere.

Several million credulous souls who are prevailed to wash their teeth occasionally for the sake of applying antiseptic chemicals and aromatic flavors with the soap would probably not brush their teeth at all with plain soap and water, so I shall say nothing about them. But our better educated dentists are saying a good deal about them, and it isn't flattering to their judgment.

I do sympathize savagely with those good housewives who still set vessels of disinfecting solutions there and there in the belief that they are thus adding one tota to the sanitary safety of the household. Do they expect the disease germs to gather round the poison wells and jump in, overwhelmed with remorse? Do they imagine, that disease germs really "drown" anywhere, except in the secretions of discharges from the invalid? They do, all right—at least they waste a lot of perfectly good disinfectants in this silly manner.

I can't sympathize with people who ask a doctor to give them a well balanced diet for any individual with his particular condition known to the doctor, but just for an average individual with nothing in particular the doctor says that he is in the last stages of health. I wouldn't balance my own diet, not while good appetizing victuals are placed before me.

Coffee and Cocoa.
Children, 8, 10, 12, take cocoa for breakfast every morning. Some biologists say it is harmful. Is it? Wife has had none of it for years. It is a stimulant and kidney stimulant of the theobromin present in cocoa or chocolate is not good for the stomach. I think children should take milk as the wholesome beverage, and perhaps cocoa after the age of thirteen. As a rule a cup of coffee or two at breakfast is rather beneficial for the stimulation and kidney stimulation is undesirable. Coffee three times a day is certainly injurious. It is little more than a stimulant to too much meat does us harm.

House Plants.
I had the flu in the last fifteen days. I was all right, but my strength is poor. My wife keeps many house plants and two neighbors have been ill. I think the plants are slowly after an illness. Would like your advice on the matter. (W. O.)
ANSWER:—I think the plants are the cause of the illness. The plants tend to improve the air in the house, but by giving off oxygen to the air, and second by increasing the moisture in the air, they tend to make the air more humid. This is the ever-popular georgina.

and one-half teaspoons of baking powder together, one-half cup of milk; add the dry ingredients and stir with the milk and beat. Add the well beaten whites of the eggs. Pour into well greased bake dish. Bake about 25 minutes. Turn out on paper.

TESTED RECIPES.
Cherry Salad—Drain one can of cherries. Fill the cavities with one-quarter cup of blanched almonds. Arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with cream mayonnaise dressing.

Cream Dressing—One-fourth teaspoon of salt, one-half tablespoon of mustard, three-quarter tablespoon of sugar, three-quarter cup of cream, one-quarter cup of vinegar, one egg slightly beaten. Mix the dry ingredients, then the cream and lastly the vinegar, cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Add the salad just before serving.

Washington Pie—Cream together one-third cup of butter substitute and one cup of sugar, add the yolks of two eggs and beat until light, sift one and one-third cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, two prunes in cold water for three hours (or over night). Cook in same water until tender; drain, cut in two, remove stones and cook. Line a plate with good rich pastry, scatter prunes over evenly. Mix one tablespoon of flour, one-third cup of sugar, the juice and grated rind of one-half lemon and sprinkle over prunes. Put on top and bake in hot oven.

If the lemon cooked is not liked, two or three cloves cooked with prunes makes the pie entirely different. A little butter improves but it is good without.

THERE IS NO ABATEMENT IN CRAZE FOR OVERBLOUSES

BY ELOISE

There seems to be an absolute craze for overblouses which shows no signs of abatement. Every taste may be suited for the styles run the gamut from the plain little frock of cotton or silken material for morning wear to the glorified creation of tulle embroidered sheer stuff suitable for the most formal afternoon function. A number of white tricotlette separate overblouses are appearing in the role of sweaters and the Tuxedo models that have so successfully held their own, are seen in the knitted fibre silk or dropstitch tricotlette with flit collar, cuffs and pockets.

The smock-like overblouse is perhaps one of the most popular models for summer wear. These have been worn with so much approval, and favor at the southern resorts that they bid fair to hold their popularity throughout the summer months. There are three of the most attractive models shown in a spring display. The one at the left is white washable satin. The one in the center is a sort of crepe, while that at the right is the ever-popular georgina.

hum, however, is plain save for three rows of stitching at the edge and clusters of yarn flowers here and there. Rows of stitching trim short sleeves and a cluster of the yarn flowers finish them. The hat worn with this outfit carries out the color scheme. It is rose colored straw embroidered in white yarn with white yarn flowers about the crown. While taken together the separate garments form a very artistic and pretty outfit, yet any of them may be worn with something else just as effectively.

Separate skirts, of course, are an important item as the overblouse and the one on the right is a very plain but beautiful model made of crepe knitted tricotlette. The simplicity of the new skirts is encouraging for one may buy the material which is usually rather costly and make a pretty model at home for a mere fraction of what the shops charge. The blouse worn with this skirt is a rich apple green georgina with the neck, cuffs and edge embroidered in black. Black silk tassels trim the belt.

The blouse in the center is designed for more informal wear. It may be worn in the morning, afternoon, in the country, at the seashore or at home. It is fashioned of French blue crepe heavily embroidered in colored yards. The deep border and designs at the edge are done in red, yellow, brown and green shades. The heavy belt is scrub colored wool woven with white yarn in black design. The neck is the ever-popular georgina.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

When you stop to think about it, isn't it rather surprising how we are all listening to what the women have to say nowadays? The women physicians from all over the world met in New York recently and the whole country sat up and paid attention to their words of wisdom. The top women labor leaders have come to this country during the last year and have toured the cities and everybody has flocked to the lecture halls to hear them. Our own suffragists are given as much space in the papers as seasoned diplomats. Everybody when women begin to speak they are given due homage.

It is not surprising then that news dispatches should carry a story about what Mrs. Zolt Hart Deming thinks of the situation in Japan. A few years ago no woman would have been given credit for knowing what was going on in our own country, not to speak of a foreign land. Today that is changed and the woman with a message is listened to just as the man is.

Mrs. Deming is publisher of an Ohio newspaper and the only woman member of the Associated Press. She has just returned from the far east, where she made a personal investigation of conditions. She states that the Japanese resent the views of the American press on Korea and Shantung and that the Japanese, as a whole, have every desire to continue and promote only friendly relations with this country.

TOO MANY WOMEN
The Salvation Army has disabled, working in co-operation with the government, is promoting emigration of approximately 1,250,000 women in excess of the male population there. Commissioner David C. Lamb, London foreign secretary of the army, on mission to the United States, has announced here.

Spinsters or emigration is the fate of these women, the commissioner asserted, adding: "We offer no apology for active propaganda designed to procure a better distribution of the sexes. There are a million and a quarter more women than men in the British Isles today, and one of the biggest after-the-war tasks assigned the Salvation Army in Britain is to stimulate female emigration and direct it to the colonies in the British empire such as western Canada and portions of Africa and Australia, where there are more men than women inhabitants. The prospect of placing women domestics in the United States has not been overlooked."

The Salvation Army has dispatched several carloads of emigrants to Canada already. We help them make arrangements to leave the old country, provide transportation when necessary and through our world-wide organization see to it that the emigrants are safely settled in the new land.

"Our records show that of the girls who emigrated some years ago to certain sections where women were in the minority 60 percent were married within three years of their arrival. That fact and the opportunities for work at good wages in the lands are not without significance to the tens of thousands of thoughtful and enterprising women in the British Isles."

His tone carried conviction in spite of myself; also, I knew he was ready to have me put under arrest and furnish his proof in court. For a minute I was limp as lead. But I pulled myself together for another shot at him. "Then you admit she was smuggling jewels into the country?"

"He shrugged—I thought to conceal his uneasiness at the way I was taking it. "No jewels belong to my wife—a wedding gift from her father—If you call it smuggling."

"But they were not declared—I know that, anyway. Well, then—since they were not declared, they were at all intents and purposes smuggled. We shall now act as though they had been smuggled—we shall now enlist the services of the government in your behalf. After the jewels are discovered, you can present evidence that they were not subject to duty. Or, if you can pay the duty, I suppose they are worth that to you to get them back?"

"What do you mean, madame?" he exclaimed in a tone that to me sounded alarm. "You sink I ask your government to seek for zee lost jewels of my daughter? Eh?"

"Not you, but I—I will ask the customs house officials to take up the case."

"You? . . . You? . . . Madame, of what are you speaking?"

"—Yes, certainly," I replied firmly, following up my advantage, for he had given it away to me that he didn't wish the customs house to know about this little smuggling of Claire's. "Since you have seen it, accuse me of a robbery I know nothing about, I shall—I must—do all I can to help Claire get her jewels back in order to prove my own conscience. I will go to the customs house and report the whole matter tomorrow morning."

"You will do nothing of the sort!" He fairly hissed the words at me. "You will tell nobody that zee jewels have been stolen—nobody. And you will give me your promise before you leave zis room."

He turned scarlet, and then deathly white, but he got control of himself immediately.

So that was the way the wind blew! My shot had carried home—I felt I had him, a good deal worse than he had me. I gave him the most dose of the same ammunition. "I certainly shall—there's nothing else to do. Now, then, what were the jewels Claire was smuggling in?"

He kept back a retort by biting his lip and glared at me. "I repeated, 'You must tell me what they are—since you accuse me of taking them. What were they? I know absolutely nothing about them. You may believe me or not, as you choose, but it's your own loss if you don't.'"

My words seemed to shake his conviction for a moment—but only for a moment, when he said in a tone that I do not doubt as to the gravity of my situation in the matter.

"And now, madame, we lay all subterfuges and evasions to rest. Zere are but two persons who could have zee jewels of my daughter—yourself and Madame Delario. I have already questioned them, and you are quite frank—I have search zee house—wis her permission I have also search her person by means of a woman detective—has convinced me zat she has not zee jewels of my daughter."

Neither have I, I snapped.

He went on as if I hadn't spoken. "My evidence is positive and wis Madame Delario's denial of all knowledge—her wish zat I send for you give you ze opportunity to explain."

"Where is Mrs. Delario—let me see her immediately," I broke in. "Do you mean to accuse me of robbing your child?"

"I do not say she precisely accuses—but she has seen you—and Claire has seen you—and zee package containing zee jewels in your hand."

I burst out hotly. "That's a lie—every word of it! I never touched her jewelry or the package containing her jewelry."

He flushed a deep red at the insult, but he was making every effort to control himself—seeing how enraged I was, he probably thought I'd use my napkin on him next—and I whipped him on, feeling that I had the upper hand.

"Yes, monsieur—I shall make you take this case to court," I went on rapidly. "After that I shall sue you for false arrest—and imprisonment, if it happens to be necessary. I shall immediately set the customs house officials on the hunt for your daughter's jewels and find out whether they were actually brought into America or not. If the jewels are in the least valuable—as you seem to be trying to make out—I will be quite sure to find them. I will pay, provided they're not confiscated outright—which is more than likely. Monsieur, you have overlooked the fact that I asked Claire and I heard Mrs. Delario ask her—if she had anything to declare and she told me she had not. So I shall be a witness in your daughter's case. Take one or two every night for a week and note the pleasing effect. 10c and 25c a box."

His expression had changed from anger to cynical contempt, and he sneered. "Very clever, madame—very creditable to madame's nervous ha, ha! Madame is afraid of nothing but to lose zee so valuable jewels of my daughter."

And with that he stepped so close I thought he was going to hold me.

I stepped back, just out of immediate reach and took a firm grip on my napkin.

"And now, madame—we lay—all subterfuges and evasions—to rest—side: Where are zee jewels of my daughter?"

"—Now, monsieur," I mocked, "we lay—all subterfuges—and evasions—to the side: I don't know."

"With a quick dive of his hand into his pocket he whipped out a small revolver.

"Perhaps zis will refresh madame's memory," he leered.

Well, it refreshed madame's something—for want of a better term I'll call it creative genius. I waved the revolver aside with a gesture of contempt and began. "Since Monsieur has been at all this trouble to obtain an interview with me, may I ask a few questions? It may be of importance to both of us."

"Proceed."

"Monsieur is, I believe, a stranger in America. Has monsieur ever acquainted himself with New York state laws?"

"To some extent—yes."

"Well, you know, if monsieur were aware of the fact that in New York state, kidnapping is a capital offense—that is, punishable with death—But what has kidnapping to do with our present case?" he asked frowning.

"Oh, only that monsieur is, at the present moment, in the act of kidnapping me."

That hit him, but he held his ground.

"I do not see it, madame. Kidnaping consists in taking ze person by violence and against zee wish."

"Not in New York state, Monsieur forgets that he is not in France or Germany, but in New York. The New York courts hold that forcible detention against the will is kidnapping. You are at this moment, in the eyes of the law, a kidnaper."

"Impossible!" he exclaimed.

EAST COAST OF FLORIDA

The eastern coastal country of Florida is the flattest, the sandiest and the cleanest looking country in the world. It is made of white sand, and when you come to it from grimy, northern cities it makes the impression of having been freshly laundered.

You would not think anything could grow in this place. It is a flat, but as a matter of fact almost anything will grow in it if it is properly fertilized. As the Lord gave Florida a mighty light soil, but He also gave her all the fertilizer she needed. He re-created the soil with both lime and phosphate are abundant in the state.

The things that grow naturally in this soil are pine trees and scrub oaks. You will find that the pine trees and oaks of open pine forests with a white sandy floor decorated with little palm trees. Herds of cattle graze here and there. Once in a while you come to a few orange groves and then a little station with orange boxes piled on the platform and oranges spilled all around.

Everywhere this flat woodland is cut by fine macadam roads, over which white and black citizens are seen traveling in divvies and also largely on bicycles. You can go all over Florida on bicycles, and the Floridians do not neglect this means of transportation.

Florida has great industrial possibilities, but it is above all an ideal land in which to loaf and go fishing.

Dinner Stories

Lectured for lying abed late, the farmer's boy promised that in future he would be "up with the lark." This next morning the old farmer came in from his milking and found his son sitting on the stile and singing as blithely as though there was no such thing as work.

"Why, you young rascal," said his exasperated sire, "this is worse than sleeping. What do you mean by loafing on that stile and singing at the top of your lungs?"

"Why, dad, you told me to be like the lark, and that's all he does when he gets up early."

In an infant school the teacher chose the miracle of the water being turned into wine as the subject of the usual Bible lesson.

In telling the story she occasionally asked a few questions. One of them was—

"Where did the new wine was brought to the governor of the feast, what did he say?"

"He said he had heard, probably on some festive occasion, called out: 'Here's luck!'"

"Perhaps I ought to tell you," said the applicant for a position, "that I have just finished serving a prison sentence."

"Oh, that's all right," said the employer. "I won't hold that against you. But wait a minute. What kind of a prison was it?"

"A model institution sir. The warden, God bless you, was a father to me."

"Ah, in that case I'm afraid you won't do. This job is not suited to a 'hothouse plant.' What I want is a man with calloused hands and a corned-beef-and-cabbage appetite."

WILL SELL FARMS AT THIRTY BUSHELS PER

G. N. Gould, of Harbor Springs, who owns 8,000 acres of cut-over land in Emmet County, is offering to sell it, not for cash, but for a consideration of 30 bushels of potatoes per acre, to be paid in five equal annual installments. The terms of the contract are easy, but Mr. Gould, it is believed, will insist upon their strict observance, and when the time comes around, he will simply hand the purchaser a potato fork and tell him to dig up.

BIG INCREASE IS SEEN IN DIVORCE CASES

Eau Claire—There has been a big increase in the number of divorce cases according to the court calendar for March term of circuit court, which convenes March 15. Twenty-five cases are listed as compared to an average of from 15 to 18 in the past terms. Only four criminal cases are listed for this term, and 28 civil cases.

If You Are a Railroadman You Serve the Public

You don't have to be a millionaire to be a railroad president. Several presidents of the "Biggest Roads in the United States have begun as section hands; a number of them started as firemen; quite a few began as telegraphers.

But being president is not the only job on a railroad. There are about as many kinds of jobs as there are kinds of men. There are jobs which pay well. Better still there are jobs which train a man to responsibility; educate him and bring out the best there is in him. The men who work the railroads have the reputation of being the most intelligent body of workmen in the country. They have to be to hold their jobs.

If you intend to become a railroad man you must set up as the first thing to learn, the idea of service to the public. You must be willing to work very far before you learn to learn things about the actual operation of the business, and the first thing you must learn there will be service to the public. If you haven't the spirit of service, you'll never get very far in the railroad business.

A second thing you must learn is discipline. The railroad is much like the army. Your "doughboy" brother can tell you about that. It means merely that when you're stopping to argue about it every or-next. Chances for quick and continued success are 10 to 1 in favor of the trained writer.

"Photoplay" writing is a business. It requires a separate training which may be gained from courses in some of our leading universities or from excellent books on the technique of scenario writing. One can not hope to start out blindly and produce a masterpiece. It takes a long time to learn the technique of the movie stage requirements."

"Didn't Dorothy?"

"No, Dorothy sent in her story which is merely a synopsis. The company's regular staff writers will take this idea of Dorothy's and put it into proper form."

"Who would buy your story?" said Billy.

The surest way to sell it is to know a movie star to whom you can send it direct. If you don't know one, send the story to a film company. Learn what different companies are doing, what kind of stories they need and what stars they are featuring. Don't be discouraged if your manuscript is returned; improve it and try another company."

der given you and that you obey the spirit of the order and not merely the word of it. If you remember that many times your obedience or disobedience of an order—perhaps an order that you think useless and foolish—means the lives of many people, you will see why discipline is so important.

A third thing to learn is loyalty. Be loyal to the road, for which you are working. It may not be the best road in the country and it is up to you to know that. But it is also up to you to try to make it the best while you are working for it. We said the first thing to think about was service. Well, you can best give service to the public by being loyal to your road.

(Are the frogs croaking in the pond? Read about them Monday.)

"You can learn a lot about the business from the movie magazines," said Billy. "I've heard of people getting $500 for one scenario."

"That is true, but don't forget what I said about the trained writer. Why work your ideas out in your 'them'?"

If the young author has new ideas, let him try! Every writer was once a beginner.

BILLY WHISKERS

By FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

Billy Whiskers and Betty hung around out of sight, until the people had stopped going into the church, and then they walked boldly into the vestibule.

The church aisle was separated from the vestibule by two green baize doors. These Billy and Betty pushed open with their noses and while the organ was playing, Billy and Betty went in and hid behind the middle aisle, side by side, as if they were a bridal couple. When they arrived at the altar, Billy stopped and commenced to eat some roses that were in a vase on the altar steps.

The congregation sat stupefied with horror to see these animals in church and directly behind the clergyman and choir boys. The music made Betty lonesome and she threw up her head and let out such a loud mule-bray that it frightened the clergyman and he jumped as if shot, for he thought he had heard Betty's mule-bray, but when he heard the sound and saw standing behind him a live burro and a goat, his astonishment knew no bounds and he stood gazing at them with open mouth, while the choir boys laughed and giggled and thought it a good joke.

Soon the ushers and deacons came to their senses enough to come forward and try to drive the beasts out. But when Billy saw them coming he ran up the altar steps into the pulpit and Betty ran through the first door she saw open, which proved not to be the outer door, but one which led into the room where the choir boys dressed.

When Betty appeared there, the boys laughed and screamed and drove her out into the church again and kicking up her heels she ran out of the church, braying for Billy. When Billy saw her go he ran down the altar steps, upsetting a neat sighted deacon who was coming up to help drive him out, and beating the deacon with his head as he rushed through the door.

They trotted along side by side down the street until they came to a big house surrounded by a high iron fence. Through the fence they could see a large brick residence with a cupola on it. On one side of the house was the flower garden, while on the other fruit patch and vegetable garden. And, oh, how good the fresh, green lettuce and beat tops looked to these tired, hungry travelers.

"Let us go in and help ourselves," said Billy.

"We can't get through the fence," said Betty, "and it's too high to jump."

"You remind me of Nanny, for she was always finding objections and obstacles to everything I wanted to do."

"Well, who in the world is Nanny? I should like to know," said Betty.

"Why haven't you told me about her?" asked Billy.

"No, you have not, Billy Whiskers, and I should like to know right away."

"Well, I'll tell you, Sonorita Betty, Nanny and you need not be so croaky about it either. She is my wife and a sweeter, dearer little wife no good ever had before!"

"You'll have to wait until tomorrow to hear what Betty had to say to that."

The Dry Cleaner is Busy at EASTER TIME

If there is one day more than any other on which a man wants to look his very, very best, it is EASTER SUNDAY.

With clothing prices as high as they are, many feel that it is almost foolish to buy as many new clothes as in former years. And, anyway, last year's spring suit will look just exactly like a new one, if sent to this expert dry-cleaning establishment.

Hundreds of men are thinking this way and that is why the dry-cleaner is rushed with work just before EASTER. Please then get your order in early so that we may be able to serve you in our usual, efficient way.

Atom Wilde Easily Beats Midget Mason in 12 Rounds

BRITON CARRIES ALL BUT FIFTH

Mason on Defensive Throughout Unable to Overcome Wilde's Rights and Lefts.

Toledo, Ohio, March 13.—Jimmy Wilde of England, recognized flyweight boxing champion of the world, proved his right to the title last night by decisively outpointing Frankie Mason of Fort Wayne, Ind., the American claimant of the title.

Throughout the battle the plucky little Briton was the aggressor. He carried the fifth in all but one round, the fifth, when Mason raced himself and put the Englishman on the defensive. Two of the rounds were even, the fourth and tenth.

Time after time, Mason when urged on by his enthusiastic supporters to break through the British guard, but the plucky little Briton dodged, feinted, shifted and retaliated with a right and left, chasing the American about the ring.

20 HORSES AT LOCAL STABLES

More at This Time Year Than Ever Before — Revival Sport Indicated.

Twenty horses, the largest stable ever known here at this time of the year, are now at the park of the Janesville Driving association at the fair grounds to be trained by George Spencer, the veteran expert.

Six came in on Thursday from Salem, Wis., and are considered extra fine fresh. Last week three were sent from the McManus stables at Chicago.

Among the horses is a very promising colt from Mr. Johns of Chicago, by De Forrest.

Lela Azoff, owned near Kenosha, also arrived last week. A very fast horse, known to Janesville horsemen as the winner of the half mile on the local track last fall in 1:10, she is looking up in great shape for the coming season.

Ordinarily at this time of the year, there are only five or six horses out at the training park. Indications are that before the racing season starts in August there will be at least 50 under the care of Spencer.

Healthy Conditions. A revival of the sport of trotting and pacing is looked for. The presence of so many horses here at this time indicates that the sport is in a healthy condition.

The war led up the horses and owners would not have them trained because of the uncertainties. In addition many of the tracks of the country were occupied by camps and a suspension of numerous fairs was made because the people would not patronize them as freely as before the war.

An indication of what may be expected this summer are the many reports for the horses are selling for higher prices than ever before. Among the recent important purchases was that made by Arlie Frost of the Milwaukee. He bought Steadman "L", rated at 2:10 for a Shullsburg, Wis., man.

BADGER CAGERS DEFEAT CHICAGO

Run up 26-17 Score on Conference Leaders in Comparatively Easy Victory.

Madison, Wis., March 13.—Wisconsin humbled Chicago, the western conference basketball champions, 26 to 17, in a hard-fought battle here last night.

Chicago's heretofore almost invincible combination, defeated only by Illinois, was baffled by the strength of the Badgers. The Cardinal guards blocked the Maroon cagers at all points. Successful dribbles by the visitors were few. The teamwork was there, but Wisconsin solved the combination every time.

The defeat does not take the championship from Chicago, but Pat Page, veteran coach who piloted the Maroons to the pennant, was forced to watch his men outplayed and outscored in the last game before he leaves for other fields. Chicago plainly missed Hinkle.

The Badgers have won at least once this season from every team in the Big Ten.

GREENIE'S RETURN

By John B. Thompson.

CHAPTER ONE.

"If this spring you find any mallards, why send them to me," remarked the tall young man who had been visiting Sharp Beaver's home ranch.

"Well, I'll try," you get 'em passed post," responded the dark-skinned Sioux. "Mallards, eh?" "Yes, mallards," the visitor observed. "My wife and I want to hatch a few under a hen. If we have any luck we'll use them for decoys next fall. Am breaking my wife into the game! How the ducks ought to pile into the real things! Now at our ducking grounds, not far from home, they have some, closely resembling the wild ones—"

"Oh, that's all right," promised Sharp Beaver, laughing at the simplicity of the request. "I'll see 'em in spring."

And this is how it came about that Greenie's mother was robbed of her first nest eggs. A shadow suddenly fell across her nest, and she saw a dark form parted the rushes. Just as a long, lean brown hand extended apparently to seize her she leaped into flight, and the bird was gone. Many circles to observe the whereabouts of the intruder, she discovered that he had stolen her eggs. She desisted once her efforts at perpetuating her kind in another less frequented part of the extensive marshes.

Had Duckyard Full of Corn? Dozens of the prairie lakes of the northwest are not supposed to thrive well when limited to city environments. Greenie had never sensed this before. Up to the present his sole preoccupation had been whether the confined area of the city backyard would always be strewn morning and evening with its usual liberal supply of corn. Yes, much of the time there was another thing that received much contemplation: he could scarcely contain himself at the little stream bed, failed to have the proper depth of water. For he wanted many baths and limberable drinks. His two meek little brown sisters seldom protested, but of late Greenie noticed that even they exhibited obvious annoyance were water lacking.

Of the nine eggs that Mr. City Dweller placed under a plump, wide-breasted, experienced hen but three hatched—two females and one male. Sometime during the summer a hand was affixed to a leg of each of the young ducks, and the three of them might be brought to the club grounds on the river. Number 12 was all that was stamped on the special circuitry of the three of convenient identification for the owner were they to mingle freely with those of other club members.

"We'll call this rascally little drake 'Greenie,'" declared Mr. City Dweller, fondly stroking the duck's head. "That's an appropriate name," agreed Mrs. City Dweller, adding a much lighter and shapelier hand to the caressing process. Then, too, at that instant the pink of her fresh young cheeks touched lightly the soft feathers. "Ray, just look at those rich streaks of green."

"Yes, they are a little early in the season for this precious youngster, therefore the name 'Greenie' holds!" She didn't! Contrailist.

And as Mrs. City Dweller did not contradict or disagree on this point, this was considered Greenie's christening. There was no further doubt of his future, and he was christened with the expectation that he would drop a customary in the neighborhood of those everlastingly vociferous sisters and the tussy old hen.

A moment in the air afforded Greenie a strange sensation. The act of merely dropping wings to sustain his weight could be increased in speed. He found that with additional strokes of pinions soon he was whirling as high as the house. Wonderful feat, he thought to himself, as he returned to terra firma and restored himself to his alarmed relatives. He even recalled while up in the air the shrill "K! K!" of his two sisters and the frightened screams of his foster mother. That brought him to earth. Otherwise he might have attempted more.

He Might Fly Away.

Mrs. City Dweller observed the performance with studious bewilderment. "What it—" she asked herself. Then it presented itself as too out of the ordinary to be considered seriously, but the presentment was still there, and she must rid herself of it. "There's no danger of Greenie."

"Not the slightest in the world!" declared her husband. "If he had been raised out near a lake there might be some danger, but in the city—bah!"

"You know I would hate to lose Greenie after so much trouble with them. In fact I would hate to lose any of them," remarked his pretty little brown-eyed wife, "but I guess there's no danger."

"No danger," commented her mate. His mind was rambling off to business affairs.

His wife took the proffered arm. Once she glanced over her shoulder contemptuously at Greenie peering his feathers. They went into the house.

Mallard Was Pondering.

Such an elevation as the young mallard had attained caused him to ponder over it, until he began to conjecture about what might be seen in the vista beyond. His initial experience had been restricted to the limitations of visions, obscured by beckings of innumerable smoke chimneys and lofty buildings. Were he ever to get beyond these what would he see? But the old hen and those two over-anxious sisters whom he had conveyed his thoughts so sedulously guarded his movements that he dared not venture to make no further venture that day.

Early the following morning he breathed the wind while his two sudden sisters worried meekly in the sand pile. Gradually he soared above the buildings. For a moment he was startled at the new aspect of life, possibilities of flight, and more unfamiliar the queer thrill that went through him and appeared to direct his actions. He was prompt enough to realize this much, that in his present physical condition, only limited flights could be made. Now the wind fatigued, and a trifle of dizziness was in his head from unaccustomed elevation. The descending process was the next thought to assail him. He had been deliberate in his endeavor to mark his home by a peculiar shiny black roof, but after a certain altitude there were countless roofs of similar coloration and dimensions.

Greenie Tired Fast.

Greenie was fast tiring. The wind was a trifle more than he could contend against successfully. How he longed for a visitation of more strength! Strength as a necessary part of his existence had never before suggested itself to Greenie. His unaccustomed wings soon felt the battle of the elements against them. Then slowly but surely with wings outstretched, he collapsed in dizzy gyrations straight into the mass of dark shapes, every one of them threatening his destruction. Was there anything that could save him? So thoughts of this kind raced with incredible speed into his mind. Then above that deafening roar of city life, when the maze of yards offered no solution to the direct path he wished, faintly could be heard the "K! K!" of his sisters. His wild instinct came to his rescue. No compass devised by man ever guided a mariner through strange waters with greater exactness than those frantic voices of his sisters. His closed his eyes in sheer weariness and almost fell into the yard.

Sisters Are Fearful.

His sisters waddled over to him apprehensively and indulging in much fuss, cautioned him against further ventures of this kind.

A few days later Mr. City Dweller moved to the suburbs. The duckyard was much more spacious and green grass was plentiful. And there was another real treat for Greenie and his sisters, a little pond in the far corner of the yard made an ideal swimming place. There the ducks spent the greater part of their day.

"It's about time you were tending to their wings," remarked Mrs. City Dweller. "Some day we will wake up and find those little darlings here!"

"Oh, we'll wait a while yet," responded the husband, "plenty of time, plenty of time before fall. Green things available at every step, fresh water always, increased area of exercise, together with a momentary desire on the part of Greenie to adjust himself to new environments, for two days destroyed any plans for another venture in the air.

Takes Many Flights.

Time and again, he gave play to short flights from one end of the yard to the other. It was all ridiculously easy now.

During one of the young drake's flights, Mrs. City Dweller saw him and mused, "That drake will be gone before those days, if Ray don't pinion him."

It must have been the moisture-laden air, swept in by the east wind from the big river, a mile away, that tempted him that day. He observed that his industrious relatives were busy. Holding himself erect, with one brown leg he was in mid-air. This time, from the natal moment almost of his excursion, to him it was actual, exhilarating, unalloyed enjoyment. He knew what freedom was! The boundlessness of the sky, the beautiful picture of bluffs and river that the landscape unfolded below him. "The wind was mild. Almost intuitively at once it came to him how to make the best use of his strength, and he soared aloft in slow eye-scanning circles. For some reason the river called to him. He dipped once into the muddy flow and then as quickly rose in flight. The movement of the current injected new fears into him.

It was in Water Hole.

Horse-shoe like, with a majestic sweep from the north, the river skirted an immense sand-bar at the mouth of which numerous marsh growths, and little bodies of water, dotted the yellow expanse. Greenie lit in one of the water holes. What a life! Nothing to molest anyone!

Always an abundance of food! The first search of his broad sensitive bill, small luscious crustaceans found their way into it. And here Greenie covered himself with loneliness and the time of day recalled him to his family. Back of the bluffs the sun was sinking, leaving a mist of crimson from one end of the horizon to the other. Greenie piped his weak little notes, jumped into the air and straight as an arrow flew to his home.

In consequence of his flight he felt no serious effects as might be anticipated. His sisters greeted him enthusiastically and both together hurrying questions at him about the country beyond their yard, to all of which he answered with forced unelaborateness of detail. He could easily conceive himself soaring to great unvisited altitudes, but for his meek little sisters who were always so worried about everything he did, such a thing was impossible. Still all their craving for knowledge was not lost upon him, and it elevated him to a loftier seat in their estimation.

CAMPAGN FOR PLANTING HYDRANGEAS IN FOND DU LAC.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth—A campaign was launched a year ago with a view of converting Fond du Lac into a "hydrangea city." A house to house canvass was made with the result that some 4,000 plants were placed with home owners and some with those who were not home owners, but who decided they wanted to be in the group of home beautifiers. Just how many of these plants may have come through the winter in safety is not known. However the money cost was relatively small and arrangements have been made for replacements and additions at the 1920 figures. This is gratifying in view of the fact that prices have advanced materially in all lines and especially in shrubbery. The Association of Commerce will be again the clearing house for this city beautiful movement and it is to be hoped it will gain in headway this year. Certainly all the plants that have died should be replaced and the number of plantings doubled over that of a year ago. Plant hydrangeas.

Safe Home 7 Per Cents for Wisconsin Investors

Wisconsin Gas & Electric Com-

pany invites subscriptions to two new security issues—$500,000 of 5-year, 7 per cent convertible gold notes, and $500,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock, at par for cash.

Certificates will be ready for delivery at the Company's offices in Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Watertown, Burlington, Whitewater, South Milwaukee and Cudahy, OR BY MAIL, on and after Wednesday, March 17. Subscriptions will be received from this date, and will be filled in the order of their receipt.

The preferred stock is issued in $100 shares. Its $7 a year of cash dividends on each $100 share are payable in quarterly installments; $1.75 April 15 to stockholders of record March 1; $1.75 July 15 to stockholders of record June 1; $1.75 October 15 to stockholders of record September 1; $1.75 January 15 to stockholders of record December 1. Besides having first claim on dividend earnings up to 7 per cent in any year, this preferred stock shares equally with the common stock in dividend payments in any year after 10 per cent has been paid on the common. It has preference also, to its par value, in any distribution of assets. It is a desirable permanent income investment for Wisconsin people.

The notes are issued in $50,

$100, $500 and $1,000 sizes. Their interest of $7 a year on each $100 is payable March 1 and September 1. The Notes come due March 1, 1925. They afford an excellent short term investment. On any interest date to and including September 1, 1924, note-holders who so desire can exchange them at par for shares of the Company's 7 per cent preferred stock.

These issues, authorized by the State, are sold to repay money borrowed to enlarge the Company's plant and business. THIS MONEY IS ALREADY INVESTED IN STATE-REGULATED, INCOME-PRODUCING PUBLIC SERVICE PROPERTY.

Wisconsin Gas & Electric Com-

pany is closely affiliated with The Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light Company, under common ownership and management. It is one of the largest and strongest public service companies in Wisconsin. It serves 32,000 gas, electric and steam heating customers—a gain of 2,200 during the past year—in six cities, 37 villages and 30 townships located in six of the richest and most populous counties of southeastern Wisconsin, and owns and operates the Kenosha street railway. Its funded debt, including the present $500,000 note issue, is $4,296,000; its preferred stock, including the present $500,000 issue, $1,000,000; its common stock, $1,747,000. Its gross revenue in 1919 was $2,451,270—an increase of $344,830 over 1918. Its 500 employees were paid $600,000 in 1919.
